If I become the Head of the School Council, I am going to ban Maths lessons.

I watched a video on YouTube which said that 98% of people never need to use any of the maths that they used in school.

This video said that somebody has done some research which says that adults only need to be able to use a calculator.

I am going to make sure that Maths lessons stop after year 3 and that Maths lessons are replaced with free time.

If I become the Head of the School Council, I am going to cut the amount of money that teachers get paid.

I read an article on www.coolnewz.biz that said that teachers are paid too much and that the money could be better spent on something else.

I think that we should spend the money that we save on VR headsets for each child. A website called www.vr4sale.com said that VR is the future of education and that in a few years we will all be using technology like this to learn.

If I become the Head of the School Council, I am going to spend more of the school's money on buying new books for the Library and employing a full-time Librarian.

I saw a BBC documentary which said that school libraries contribute to higher exam scores, higher reading ages, a greater love of reading and a more positive attitude towards learning.

If we had our own full-time Librarian then we could spend more time in the library and find more books that we love!

If I become the Head of the School Council, I am going to ban vegetables from the school lunches.

I saw a post on Facebook which said that children don't actually need to eat vegetables to keep healthy. Apparently, the vegetable-growers have been lying to us for years so that we buy more of their produce!

I will make sure that vegetables are replaced by extra bread, puddings and desserts. They will give us lots of energy for our afternoon's learning.
