

Activity 3: Misinformation in the news

Objective:

To recognise signs of misinformation in the news.

Newsi:

Hi! My name is Newsi and these are my friends Omar and Olive. We are members of our school's News Club. We have been exploring online news sites to find ideas for our School News Bulletin.

NEWS
FLASH!

We have been looking at lots of different news websites but we have noticed that some news sites contain articles that are full of people's opinions and things that are not true. It seems that some websites present lies and opinions as the truth.

That's right! Sometimes the information that is on the internet is not factual. Sometimes, stories or websites that are posted online are exaggerated or completely made up to make the reader think or feel a certain way. This can affect the choices that people make and the way that they behave.

NEWS
FLASH!

This is called misinformation

FLASH!

This is called

misinformation

This prefix is used to show that something has been done wrong or badly.

NEWS FLASH!

Omar

Why would someone create news that wasn't real or spread misinformation?

AJ

People often use misinformation to grab people's attention. They want as many people to read and share it as possible.

FLASH!

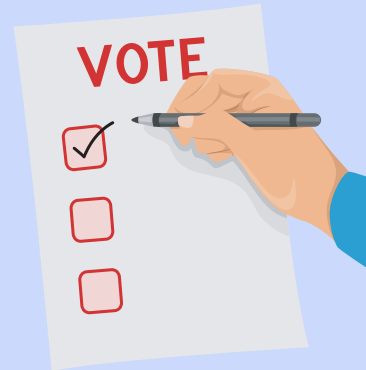

Olive

Why are they looking for attention?

There can be lots of reasons but they are mainly...

...to make money from advertising on their website.

...to make someone think a certain way and to influence them.

...because they think it is funny.

NEWS
FLASH!

Thanks AJ! Let's look at some news websites to explore how we can tell if an online news story contains misinformation.

10,000 scientists Admit that Climate Change is a Hoax!

by Jerry A.

An online petition stating that climate change is a hoax has now been signed by 10,000 scientist.

The statement in the petition says climate change, and the (also fake) greenhouse effect are terms created by politicians!!!

I have never doubted it was a hoax, and I am relieved that this is now backed by scientists.

An online petition stating that climate change is a hoax has now been signed by 10,000 people who say are scientists.

The petition states that climate change, and the (also fake!!!) greenhouse effect were invented to hide the truth.

I have never doubted climate change was a lie, and I am relieved that this is now proven.

Be careful!

Sometimes, people share or repost stories that are old or out of date. The information in the article may no longer be true and they may be doing this to make people feel angry, scared or upset.

Fact or Opinion?

Does the article contain facts that can be proven and found elsewhere?

Are the "facts" vague and unspecific or a little too convenient?

Does it contain opinions?
Are those opinions presented as facts?

The writer of this article clearly has a strong opinion about this subject and they are keen to share this with the reader.

It presents the author's opinions as facts and clearly has an agenda.

The source of the information in this article is "An online petition". Which online petition?

Does a petition count as evidence or proof?

Who signed it?

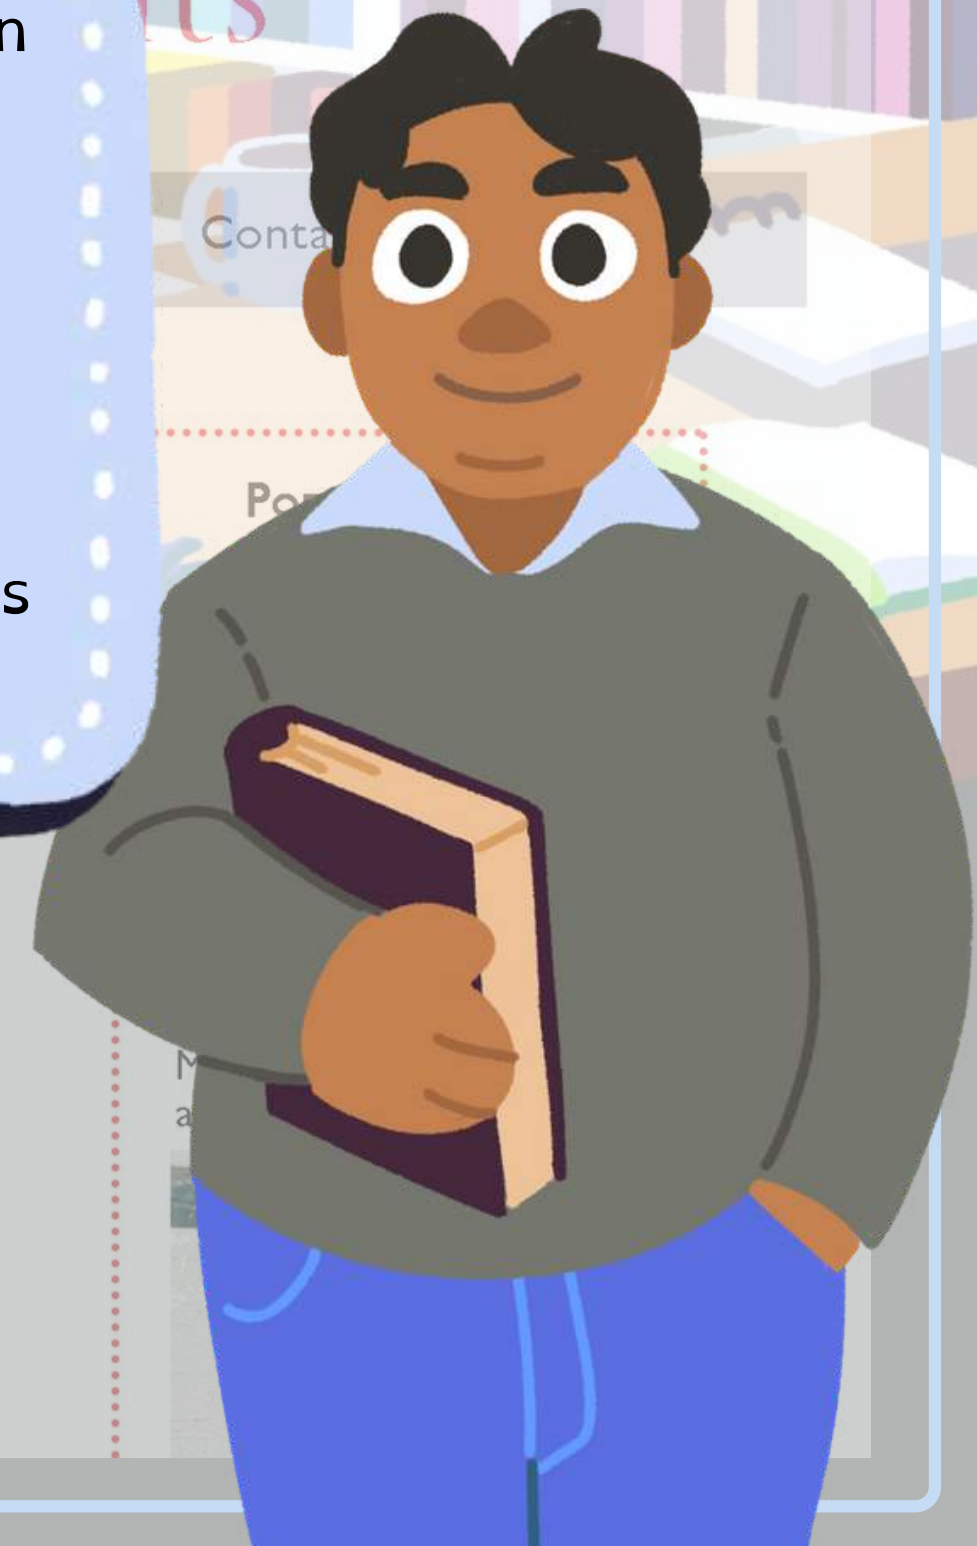

If the author doesn't give specific details then this can be a sign that their sources are not reliable.

Why?

If an article leaves out one or more of these W words then you need to consider why the author has done this.

Is the author trying to avoid sharing something that they don't want you to know?

Why not try searching for the missing information on another website?

Jerry's Thoughts

Newsi:

Wow! Thanks AJ. That was really useful. Now I know how to spot whether a news article might contain misinformation.

AJ:

As long as you know what to look out for and you are happy to fact-check anything that you are unsure of, you will be able to keep yourself safe from misinformation.

That's right!

To make sure that you are aware of misinformation in the news, remember to:

- Choose what you read, watch or listen to very carefully.
- Look out for sensational headlines, anonymous authors, authors that have an agenda, out-of-date stories, missing facts and opinions that are presented as fact.
- FACT-CHECK the things that you read if you are unsure whether they are true.

Have you played the game yet?
